Adams Family Pamphlets Are Deposited With the Library of Congress

Mrs. Richard M. Cutts has deposited a collection of bound pamphlets once owned by John Quincy Adams, his wife, Louisa Catherine Adams, and their granddaughter, Mary Louisa Adams. The collection is in the custody of the Rare Book and Special Collections Division.

The country has benefited from both the Cutts and Adams families' service in public affairs. The Adamses' impressive contribution led Librarian of Congress Daniel J. Boorstin to observe, "If we can understand what the Adamses did for America and what America did to the Adamses, we will witness, not merely the fortunes of a family, but the panoramic transformation of a nation." The two families' relationship extends back to Mary Elizabeth Cutts' close friendship with Louisa Adams. Mary Cutts was with Mrs. Adams at her husband's deathbed in 1848.

In a group of books having remarkable association interest, the eulogies of her husband sent to Mrs. Adams stand out. The nation expressed deep grief at John Quincy Adams' death. Although his actions during his term as President were often controversial because of his independent nature, he was respected, and, as one of the last public figures to have known both Jefferson and Washington, many thought his passing marked the end of an epoch. Testimonies to his achievements came from as far away as Great Britain. Popular figures such as Edward Everett, as well as less well-known individuals, put their sentiments in print. Some of the eulogies were crudely printed on newspaper presses and today are known to exist in only a few copies. Several of the pamphlets are inscribed to Mrs. Adams by the authors. In his diary, Adams paid tribute to his wife and termed his marriage the "happiest and most eventful portion of my life." Destined to suffer a debilitating stroke soon after her husband's death, Louisa Adams cherished the eulogies sent to her and had them bound in a handsome full-leather binding with gilt decoration.

Historians have been less kind to Adams than they have to Jefferson, his frequent dining partner. The two men were, in the words of Allan Nevins, "incapable of understanding one another," and yet Adams' career exhibits many of the wide-ranging activities and interests for which Jefferson is today so much admired. Adams taught at Harvard, was both a state and United States Senator, and Secretary of State before his election as President in 1824. Following his defeat in 1828, Adams was elected to the House of Representatives, where he served for 18 years. He was a poet, a scholar, helped Thomas McKenney edit The History of the Indian Tribes of North America, and had a keen interest in astronomy. His guidance of the James Smithson bequest paved the way for the establishment of the Smithsonian Institution. A strong nationalist who believed that the Federal Government should actively seek ways to benefit citizens, he also had informed views on international affairs. His foreign policy positions are still cited by American statesmen as valuable historical precedents.

Adams' multivolume Memoirs, published posthumously from 1874 to 1877, is one of the most important original sources in American political history. Although his impatience with pretension and intolerance of those content with appearance rather than substance prompted him to make acerbic comments about many of his contemporaries, he was no less harsh on himself. He was constantly dissatisfied with his performance and often worried about how history would view him. In the Cutts deposit are two volumes of his own works gathered for his favorite granddaughter, Mary Louisa Adams. The many patriotic addresses and government documents Adams selected demonstrated the strong sense of public duty for which he wanted to be remembered and which he tried to instill in his children and grandchildren.

The Library of Congress Information Bulletin is issued weekly by the Library of Congress and distributed free of charge to publicly supported libraries and research institutions, academic libraries, learned societies, and allied organizations in the United States.

Comparable institutions and organizations in other countries may arrange to receive the Bulletin on the exchange basis by applying in writing to the Library's Exchange and Gift Division. All other correspondence should be addressed to the LC Information Bulletin, Information Office, Library of Congress, Washington, D.C. 20540.

Adams' gift to his granddaughter was in keeping with his interest in books and reading. He formed an outstanding library which in 1815 outnumbered the one Jefferson sold to Congress, now housed in the Rare book and Special Collections Division. He served on the Library Committee while in Congress. In 1829, Adams wrote that "I have been half a century, as greedy of books as Hallno was of Salmon's belly."

It is unlikely that there will again be available books having such an intimate connection with John Quincy Adams as those which Mrs. Cutts has transmitted to the Library of Congress. Almost his entire library is in the Boston Athenaeum and the Adams National Historic Site in Quincy, Mass. Early Presidents were among the greatest bibliophiles of their day. Their respect for knowledge and belief in man's capacity for spiritual and intellectual growth formed their ideas about government and are expressed in the books they collected and used. Books in Mrs. Cutts' deposit join volumes in the division from the Presidential libraries of Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Polk, Lincoln, Theodore Roosevelt, and Woodrow Wilson. They may be consulted in the Rare Book and Special Collections Reading Room (LJ 256) in the Thomas Jefferson Building between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Joseph Howard Is Named Director Of National Agricultural Library

Joseph H. Howard, Assistant Librarian for Processing Services at the Library of Congress since June 1978, has been named director of the National Agricultural Library, effective July 11. The announcement was made by Orville G . Bentley, Assistant Secretary for Science and Education, U.S. Department of Agriculture.

In paying tribute to Mr. Howard's years of service, Librarian of Congress Daniel J. Boorstin stated, "The National Agricultural Library is fortunate in acquiring Joe Howard as its new director. He is a librarian of great vision, energy, and organizing ability. We will miss him here at the Library of Congress where he has been an effective director of the Processing Services department. But we have the solace that he remains a colleague in the services of the library community who will benefit from his acceptance of this new assignment."

Mr. Howard came to the Library of Congress in 1967 as assistant chief of the Descriptive Cataloging Division and became chief of that division the following year. He was named chief of the Serial Record

STAFF NEWS

Online Location Data Now Provided for Law Collection

Two recent developments providing automated bibliographic and location data should improve retrieval efficiency for items from the Law Library collection.

In 1969, the Library of Congress implemented the Class K schedule for legal materials (Class KF for the law of the United States) and gradually increased its classification coverage to other jurisdictions and topics, for example, Class KD, the Law of the United Kingdom and Ireland; Class K law (general); Class KE, law of Canada; and Class KK, law of Germany. Most recently, schedules have been developed for the law of the Americas, Latin America, and the West Indies as Class KDZ, Class KG, and Class KH (see the LC Information Bulletin for March 14, pp. 94–95).

For all other legal jurisdictions and areas for which classified schedules have not yet been developed, the general classification LAW is still applied. Since March, the complete location information for each item classified LAW has been available through the MUMS data base. This additional information appearing in the call number field is considered unique to the Library's own collections and therefore will be enclosed in angle brackets. For example, the call number for a recent title that has been much in demand, Dina Kaminskaya's book Final Judgement: My Life as a Soviet Defense Attorney, would appear thus:

CPI  82-19128
CAL  LAW<USSR 7 Kami 1982>
IDC  345.47/C5044/0924 B 344.70550440924 B 19
MEP  Kaminskaya, Dina.
TIL  Final judgement : my life as a Soviet defense attorney / Dina
     Kaminskaya ; translated from the Russian by Michael Glenny.
IMP  New York : Simon and Schuster, c1982.
COL  364 p. ; 25 cm.
NOG  Includes index.
SUT  Lawyers--Soviet Union--Biography.
SBN  ISBN 0-671-24739-5
LCI  2 3 3 3 3
LAN  engrus

The availability of such complete LAW call numbers (actually shelf notations) should eliminate several steps previously needed to determine a complete LAW call number and should thereby expedite the filing of call slip requests by patrons in the Law Library Reading Room and by users in the other parts of the Library. In addition, this development should enhance the direct retrieval by those employees from such offices as the Loan Division, Congressional Research Service, and the Photoduplication Service who frequently have need of law items and are authorized to use the Law Library's restricted stacks.

Legal information technician Jerome Roaché checks SCORPIO NEWS 550 for the location of a specific LAW item, as Law Library unit supervisor Janish Anderson looks on.

In a second development, the index to the location of the collections in the Law Library's subbasement stack area is now available online in SCORPIO News 550. The following News options give specific range locations for all Class K and LAW jurisdictions and arrangements:

News 551: Custodial Responsibilities
News 552: Access to the LL Collection and Hours of Service
News 553: Range Location of Material (excluding Continental Europe and other foreign jurisdictions)
News 554: Range Location of Material (foreign jurisdictions)
Includes Options A–J

This online system will provide current location information needed for efficient retrieval, and range locations will be updated and revised as changes are made.

Dorothy Bartlett Dies

Dorothy W. Bartlett, former staff member in the Geography and Map Division, died on May 26 in Sun

City Center, Fla. Mrs. Bartlett retired on February 27, 1976, after 32 years of Federal service, 14 of which were spent at the Library of Congress.

Before joining the staff of the Library of Congress, Mrs. Bartlett had a long and distinguished career as a map librarian and geographer with the National Archives and Records Service, the Foreign Economic Administration, the U.S. Department of State, the U.S. Department of Agriculture, and the Central Intelligence Agency. In 1962, Mrs. Bartlett transferred from the latter agency to the Library of Congress where she was appointed head of the Reference and Bibliogrpahy Section, Geography and Map Division. In 1970, she was appointed to the newly created position of bibliographer of the division, a position she occupied until her retirement.

A native of Richmond, Va., Mrs. Bartlett received a bachelor of arts degree from Randolph Macon Woman's College in Lynchburg, Va., in 1932, a bachelor of library science degree from Emory University Library School in Atlanta, Ga., in 1933, and a certificate in cartography from the George Washington University, Washington, D.C., in 1944. Mrs. Bartlett was a long-time member of several professional organizations including the Special Libraries Association, the American Library Association, and the Association of American Geographers.

Paul Winkler Retires

Paul W. Winkler, senior descriptive cataloging specialist in the Office for Descriptive Cataloging Policy, retired on June 24 after 20 years of service with the Library of Congress. Mr. Winkler first joined the Library staff in October 1946 as a cataloger in the Book Section of the Copyright Cataloging Division, becoming assistant head of the section in January 1947. He left the Library at the end of December 1947 and returned in September 1964 as head of the English Language Section, Descriptive Cataloging Division. In 1966 and 1967, he served as assistant chief of the Shared Cataloging Division and, in January 1968, became principal descriptive cataloger, the position he held until 1975. During this period he served as principal adviser on descriptive cataloging policy to C. Sumner Spalding, who was then the Library's director for cataloging. With Mr. Spalding he worked on the Library of Congress contribution to ISBD developments on the International Standard Bibliographic Description (ISBD), as well as other projects of national and international significance that were of concern to the Library. Pursuant to his ISBD work, he rewrote Chapter 6 of the first edition of the Anglo-American Cataloging Rules to incorporate provisions from the ISBD(M). His new edition of this chapter was adopted by the Library of Congress in 1974. In 1975 he was given a leave of absence from the Library to serve as editor of the second edition of the Anglo-American Cataloguing Rules (AACR 2), which was published in 1978. Upon completion of that assignment, Mr. Winkler assumed his most recent position in the Office for Descriptive Cataloging Policy.

Born in Buda, Ill., Mr. Winkler received a bachelor of education degree from Illinois State University and both bachelor's and master's degrees in library science from the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. In addition to his career at the Library of Congress, Mr. Winkler cataloged at the University of Illinois Library and at Yale University Library, where he became head of the Social Science Section in the Subject Cataloging Division. He also taught at the University of Denver and the University of Southern California, specializing in the teaching of courses in cataloging, the history of books and libraries, and Government publications. In 1979, the American Library Association awarded Mr. Winkler the Margaret Mann Citation for his work as editor of AACR 2.

Mr. Winkler will be remembered by Library of Congress staff members and by many librarians on the national and international scenes, not only for the milestones of expertise and formal honor for his expertise, but also for his truly wonderful manner of participating in deliberations or simply dispensing wisdom. Most of his professional colleagues cannot stay absolutely calm during discussions, particularly when the issues are vital to their personal concerns or those of their institutions. Also, they generally tend to feel a certain amount of rancor about disappointing decisions on such issues. Mr. Winkler had as much professional concern and deep-seated personal involvement with cataloging issues as anyone, and yet he managed to make his points with an almost Olympian calm. He did not waste time and energy on disappointments: once decisions were made, he accepted them even though they might be disappointing and then moved on with implementation of that decision, at the same time quite ready for the next challenge.

Mr. Winkler plans to continue to reside in the Washington, D.C., area following his retirement.

TV Producer and Psychologist To Speak on July 20

Sandra Butler, executive producer of WDVM Television, and Arnold Kahn, psychologist and associate editor of Psychology of Women Quarterly, will be guest panelists discussing "The Working Woman: Coping with Career and Family" in the Mumford Room on Wednesday, July 20, at 10 a.m. Freddie Peaco of the National Service for the Blind and Physically Handicapped will represent the Library on the panel, which will be chaired by Sylvia Cooke Martin, the Library's staff training and development officer. The program is sponsored by the Women's Program Advisory Committee.

Staff members wishing to attend this hour meeting or activity must receive permission from their supervisors.

Staff Activities

Arnold G. Bellefontaine, executive officer in the Office of the Associate Librarian for National Programs, addressed a general session of the annual meeting of the Medical Library Association in Houston, Tex., on June 1. Mr. Bellefontaine's talk was entitled "The Effective Use of Library Consultants: Connecting New Networks."

John P. Comaromi, chief of the Decimal Classification Division, recently gave several workshops on the 19th edition of the Dewey Decimal Classification (DDC) and attended several meetings regarding the development and extension of the DDC. In Florence, Italy, on March 21–22, he discussed the Italian translation of Edition 19 with its translators at the offices of the Regione Toscana Servizio Beni Librari. On March 23, John Humphry, executive director of Forest Press, and Mr. Comaromi gave an all-day colloquium on the DDC to more than 200 Italian librarians. On May 16 and 17, Mr. Comaromi met in London with representatives of the School Library Association and John Humphry to discuss the development of the fourth edition of the Introduction to the Dewey Decimal Classification for British Schools, now to be broadened to serve the English-speaking world.

On May 18, Messrs. Comaromi and Humphry met with the Project Team of Preston Polytechnic that is developing and recommending a new structure for the Life Sciences in the DDC.

Mr. Comaromi will give all-day workshops on Edition 19 of the DDC in Phoenix on June 24, Seattle on July 5, Salem on July 6, Boise on July 8, and Iowa City on July 11. He gave a speech on the DDC at the Dallas Public Library on June 20 and will speak at the ALA hearing on DDC in Los Angeles on June 28.

Birth Announcement

Letitia Jew Reigle and Charles Reigle are the parents of a son, John Charles, born on April 30. Mrs. Reigle works in the Decimal Classification Division, and Mr. Reigle is an electrician.

Philatelic Club Offers Scott Joplin Covers

The Library of Congress WRA Philatelic Club is offering special first-day envelopes for sale in conjunction with the issuance of a U.S. postage stamp on June 9 honoring ragtime composer Scott Joplin (1868–1917). With its roots in pioneer America, Joplin's ragtime is regarded by many music historians as a mixture of all the ingredients that make up our nation. The cachet on the envelope reproduces the cover of the sheet music for The Cascades, which was published in 1904. The sheet music itself is part of the extensive collection of music and music literature to be found in the Library's Music Division. The envelopes feature the cachet, the 20-cent Scott Joplin stamp, and the first-day-of-issue cancellation from Sedalia, Mo., site of the annual Scott Joplin Festival.

Orders for the envelopes, which sell for $1 each, should be sent to the Library of Congress WRA Philatelic Club, Attn: Gary McCone, Processing Services, Washington, D.C. 20540, tel. (202) 287–5795. Orders must be prepaid and should include a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Checks should be made payable to the "Library of Congress Philatelic Club."

Division in 1972 and assistant director (cataloging) of the department in 1975. He became director of the Processing Department in 1976 and Assistant Librarian for Processing Services during a 1978 reorganization. He has served as acting director of the National Agricultural Library since last December.

Mr. Howard holds both a bachelor's degree in music education and a master's degree in library science from the University of Oklahoma. He served with the U.S. Army in 1952–54 and subsequently held positions with the libraries of the University of Colorado and Washington University in St. Louis, Mo.

Henriette D. Avram, the Library's director for processing systems, networks and automation planning, and Lucia J. Rather, the director for cataloging, both in Processing Services, will continue to share the responsibility for the administration of that department until a successor is named.

Terminals Are Installed to Process Chinese, Japanese, Korean Records

The first eight Research Libraries Group CJK (Chinese-Japanese-Korean) terminals have been installed in the Library's Shared Cataloging Division. The installation begins a new phase in the cooperative cataloging venture entered into between the Library of Congress and the Research Libraries Group, Inc. (RLG) (see the LC Information Bulletin for March 26, 1982, pp. 95–100).

The RLG CJK terminals were manufactured by

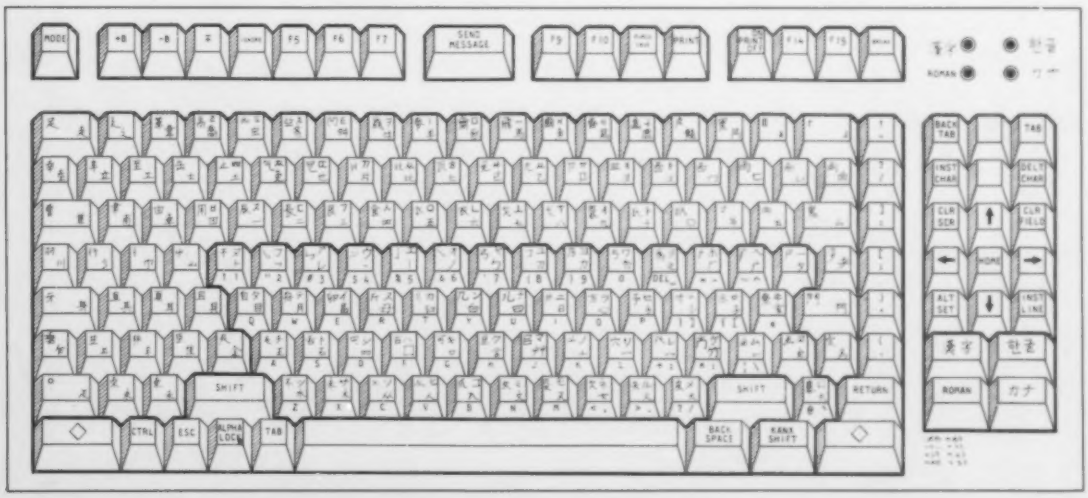
Members of Executive Session visited the Shared Cataloging Division on June 8 for a demonstration of the new RLG CJK terminals. Beatrice Ohta, head of the Chinese/Korean Languages Section, Descriptive Cataloging Division, demonstrated the creation of Chinese characters for (standing, left to right) Donald C. Curran, The Associate Librarian of Congress; John Polk, Assistant U.S. Attorney, Department of Justice, who was a guest at the session; Glen A. Zimmerman, Associate Librarian for Management; Adoreen M. McCormick, legislative liaison officer; John J. Kominski, general counsel; John C. Broderick, Assistant Librarian for Research Services; Carol A. Nemeyer, Associate Librarian for National Programs; and Henriette D. Avram, acting Assistant Librarian for Processing Services; and (seated) John Charles Finzi, director, Collections Development Office. Others present included Carleton W. Kenyon, Law Librarian; Louis R. Mortimer, director of personnel; Barbara J. Roland, chief, Automation Planning and Liaison Office (APLO); Hugo W. Christianson, assistant chief, Shared Cataloging Division; and Joe Wright of APLO.



Transtech International Corp. and were designed specifically to interact with RLG's Research Libraries Information Network (RLIN) technical processing system. The keyboard (illustrated on p. 215) has 179 keys, 135 of which contain 245 Chinese character components, 96 Japanese katakana and hiragana characters, 33 Korean hangul letters, and the ALA extended roman alphabet character set. The remaining keys are function and control keys. The terminal uses a component entry input system which allows the user to enter characters by keying in a sequence of their constituent shapes. Despite their complexity, it takes only an average of 3.6 keystrokes to create a Chinese character. At this point, staff members have the capability of creating more than 13,500 Chinese and Japanese characters, plus some 2,000 Korean characters. Eventually, the number of characters that can be created using the RLG CJK terminals could potentially be greater than 33,000.

When the RLIN CJK system becomes operational later in the summer, the Library of Congress will use the RLIN system to create Chinese, Japanese, and Korean machine-readable records for the Library's monographic holdings in these languages. A pilot project is planned to test effective workflows for the material within the Library. Fourteen libraries are participating in the total project. The Library of Congress, the Hoover Institution on War, Revolution and Peace, and Columbia, Princeton, and Brigham Young Universities will be the first institutions to use the new system when the computer programs become operational at RLG.
